BRANDON OGRODNIK,

“Spot”

As a 3D designer and artist, my work is to inspire a transcendent experience of profound beauty, mystery, and awe, and provide unique insights into the nature of reality, life, and consciousness. For the senior show, I have created the progression of pollution on our earth and how it may end up if we keep damaging our earth as my imagination for awareness. I have created a 3D robot named “spot” and he travels across the damaged world but meets hope.

JAROD BRZYSKI,

“Losing Our Cool”

To me, graphic design has always been about expression. It is a way to not only express myself and my ideas, but also evoke emotions through the intended message of each piece. For the senior show, I decided to design a global warming campaign. I wanted to create pieces that not only show the reality of the issue, but also inform the viewers of some solutions. My main focus is exemplified through the “Losing Our Cool” (the slogan I created) series; where I was able to share the six solutions I found on NASA’s climate site.

KIM CASINO,

“Nature’s Protective Canopy”

The multi-facet aspect of graphic design intrigues me: the expression, the communication, and the solution. While the journey to solution maybe complex, the ultimate expression must be the most succinct communication. Recognizing our symbiotic relationship to our environment, for the senior show, I illustrated an infographic presenting the benefit of trees. The package design represents the harvest of trees and health benefits offered. I hope to help people realize how important trees are to our environment.

LILLY FLICKER,

“Fast Fashion”

To me, design is the use of one’s creativity to convey a thought into the creative space. Design is used to create ideas and to spark conversation. For the senior show, I wanted to bring attention to the environmental impact that the fashion industry has on the world. Many don’t tend to think about this effect the industry has on the environment as it’s easy to forget as clothing is a necessity, but not only is it a necessity, it can also be a luxury.

CHRISTINA GRASSO,

“The Calm After the Storm”

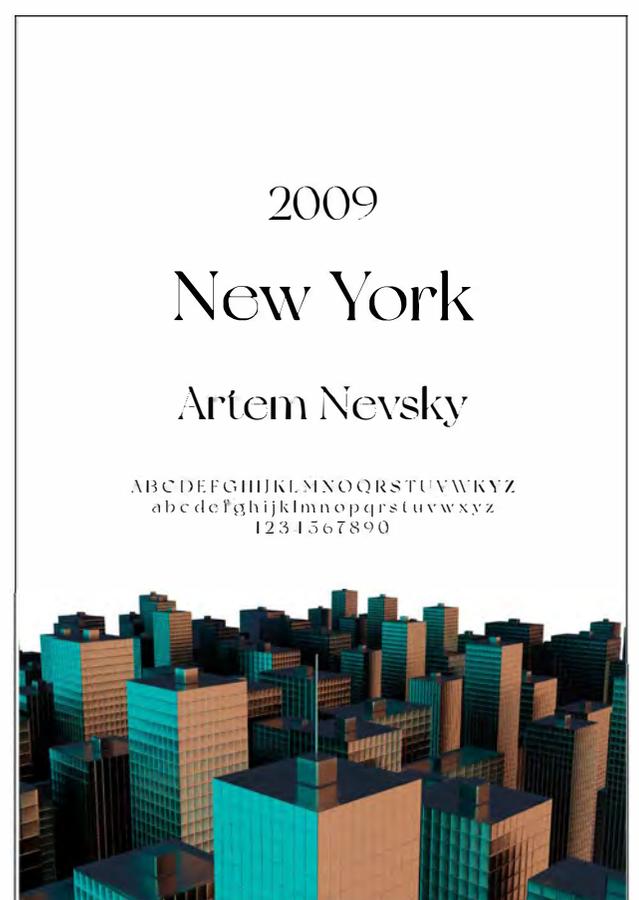

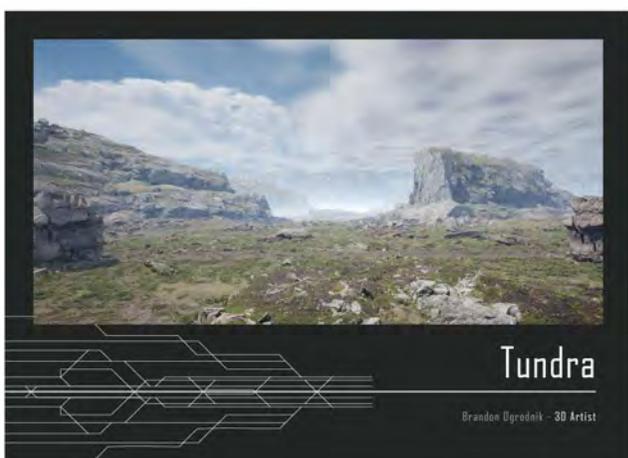

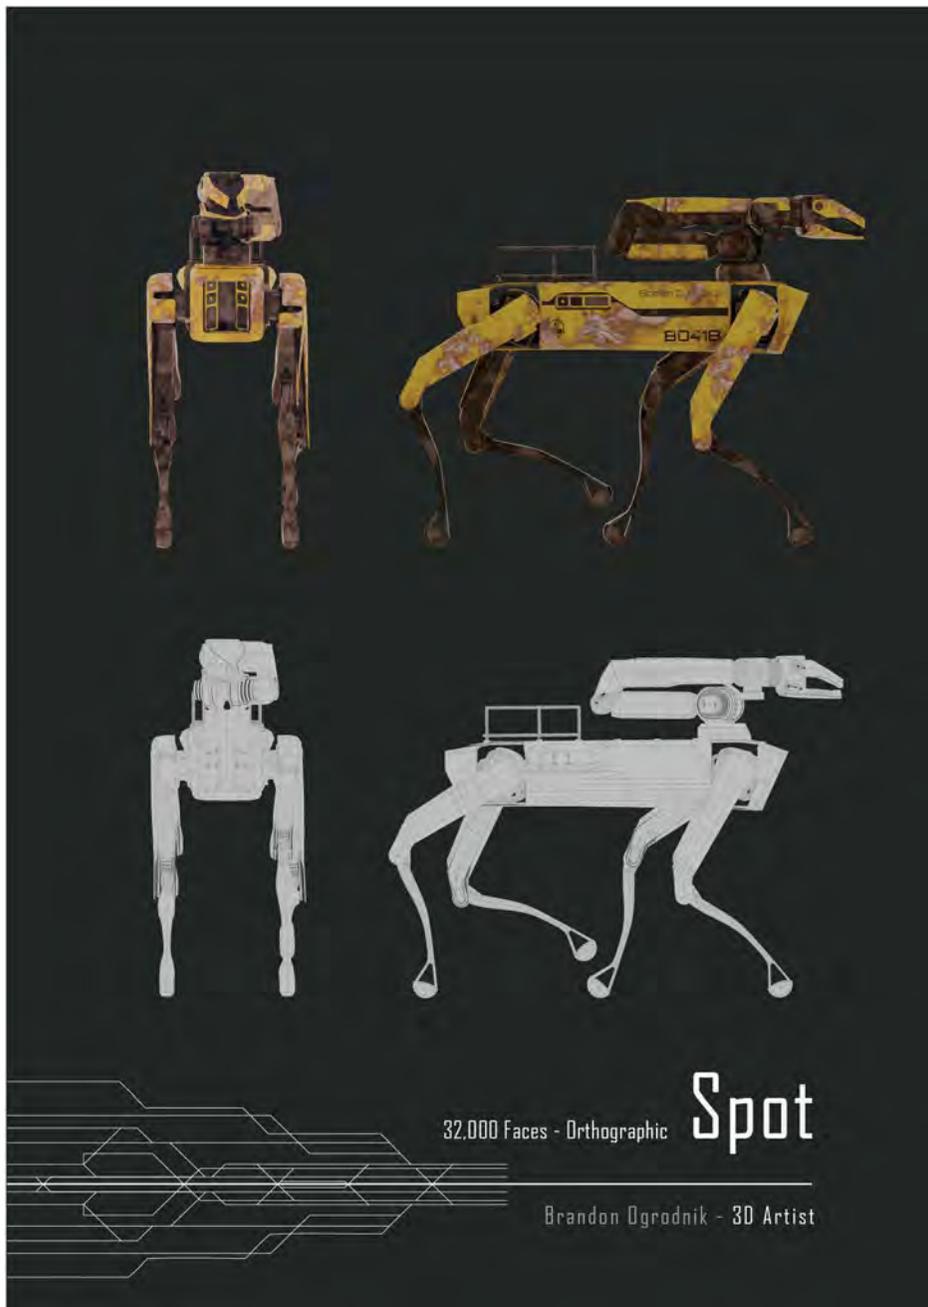

Graphic design is the process of decisions. There are a great number of considerations and choices in expressing what makes me creative. For the senior show, my project is based on hurricanes. Although these tragedies can’t be prevented, they can be prepared for, and the process of rebuilding is powerful. My channels are an infographics poster, preparation cards and box, and interactive infographics. Within these designs I hope to portray becoming a community and being the cause of preparation and restoration.
